Foreword

Ireland's Aviation & Aerospace Innovation Trade Mission to The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia

Today, Ireland is home to a world-leading ecosystem of 250 aviation and aerospace companies, with leading-edge expertise that spans all aspects of the sector. From Maintenance, Repair and Overhaul (MRO) to aerospace component supply, comms and satellite technology, drone manufacturing, design and development, simulation training for pilots, and revenue optimisation, to high-tech fabrics for aircraft interiors, Irish expertise is the wind beneath the wings of the global aviation and aerospace sector.

Irish people hold some of the most senior positions in the industry globally.

Ireland is also a world leader in the global leasing market, with more than 50 aircraft leasing companies present on the island, including 14 of the world's top 15 lessors. This helps drive global customer demand for the planes of today and eVTol's aerial platforms of tomorrow.

Ireland:

The new world of work

Ireland is a global centre of excellence for talent tech as a result of the unique position it holds as a strategic hub for leading global employers across industries such as technology, biopharma, and financial services.

Why partner with Irish HR Tech companies?

Ireland's progressive, technology-led and globalised world of work has cultivated a uniquely innovative talent sector. Irish talent tech empowers international companies to source their future workforce, providing solutions to attract, retain, engage, and reward the best talent for their brand.

Future-focused

Irish companies are delivering talent tech across the employee life cycle – from applicant tracking systems to employee engagement and wellbeing solutions. As the world of work undergoes seismic shifts caused by remote working, skills shortages, younger generations and the gig economy, Irish providers are helping progressive HR and recruitment functions around the world to attract, manage, and develop exceptional talent.

At VRAI, our mission is to redefine exceptional human performance through better training by unlocking every individual's full potential in order to help save lives. We believe human performance data is currently the untapped resource in training and have built our product - HEAT - to transform this resource into actionable insights.

We envision a future where simulation is within arms reach of anyone who needs it, where individuals can access personalised, adaptive learning environments, so that they can develop the skills they need to flourish. HEAT integrates with simulators of all kinds to provide an analytics layer that delivers actionable insights into human performance.

We work with customers in defence and security such as the Irish Defence Forces, The Royal Air Force and BAE Systems. We also have customers in civil aviation - IAG In Heathrow Airport and energy generation with Orsted and Vestas as well as working with some of the worlds largest companies such as Amazon Web Services, Pfizer Pharmaceuticals and Samsung Electronics.
